What is Application Performance Management (APM)?

APM includes monitoring and management of software applications and their performance. It includes real user monitoring, deep dive application component monitoring, transaction monitoring, and analytics. It is a critical function managed by DevOps, IT operations, application teams, developers, support teams, business managers, and other application professionals.

This infographic is based on behavior of users researching and comparing APM solutions at IT Central Station. It includes data based on over 70,000 views of APM reviews and comparisons in 2014.

Use this crowdsourced data to build a short list and select which vendors to consider for APM.
